The Center for the First-Year Experience hires, trains, and supports student leaders in facilitating inclusion at the University of Wisconsin-Madison through the Our Wisconsin program. Currently, Our Wisconsin is hiring 50+ student peer facilitators for 2018-2019 academic year. Our Wisconsin is an all-student inclusion program, created to help incoming students explore issues of diversity and identity in a group of their peers.

As an Our Wisconsin facilitator, you will learn to:

- Reflect on your own and others’ heritages, perspectives, and experiences, and explore how they have shaped you.
- Further your own and others’ understanding about other identities, cultures, and populations that have been historically and are currently disadvantaged.
- Think about the possible impact of your and others’ actions might have on others, and admitting when you’ve made a mistake.
- Listen and believe when individuals from groups that you are not part of share your experiences.
- Intervene and speak up for individuals and groups in your community when you are mistreated, disrespected, or devalued.

Curriculum will be provided, and facilitators will be trained on all aspects of facilitation. A brief training will be provided in April 2018, and a more intensive 2-3 day training will be provided in August 2018. Facilitators will be expected to attend all of the training.

Our Wisconsin sessions will begin August 2018. Workshops will take place both prior to the first day of class, and during the first weeks of the semester. Facilitators are expected to commit to these sessions based on availability.
